Two elections set for June 3

BY DENA BISNETTE
The Hancock County Election Commission has determined that two separate elections will have to be held June 3, which will lead to extra expenses for the county.

According to Hancock County Election Commissioner Charles Gottschalk, the commission will meet Monday to discuss proposals for reducing the cost from the anticipated $18,000 for two elections.

The normal cost of an election is about $10,000, he said.

The two elections include a Democratic primary and a special election for a referendum on the county unit system of government as well as two proposed constitutional amendments.

"We will be using the same precincts, but in each one we will have to have two ballot boxes, separate pollbooks, separate signature books, separate voting stands and two sets of pollworkers," Gottschalk explained.

The Democratic primary will include candidates for a US Congressional seat, a State Supreme Court seat, and two Chancery Court Judge posts. A circuit court post originally included has only one candidate.

A federal court injunction is delaying two Circuit Judge positions and a Chancery Judge position originally supposed to be included in the June 3 primary.

Gottschalk said federal clearance for those three races is not expected to be obtained before June 3, making a later primary necessary.

The late primary is also expected to cost about $10,000.

Bay man jailed in shooting

BY DENA BISNETTE

A preliminary hearing is scheduled Monday for a Bay St. Louis man arrested on aggravated assault charges after a Friday night shooting incident.

Thomas Roy Mercer of 216 Bay Oaks Drive was jailed on $25,000 bond after his arrest, Bay Police Chief Ray Murphy said.

Murphy said the shooting victim, Emmett Galloway of Sycamore Street, was wounded in the left hip but was reported in good condition Saturday at Hancock General Hospital.

Buccanneer is scene of gunfire, fighting

BY DENA BISNETTE

Beach Road in front of Buccanneer Park was blocked for more than an hour Friday afternoon as a result of a disturbance among a group of New Orleans, La., high school students in the park's day use area.

According to Waveland Police officer James Varnell, the disturbance apparently involved more than 100 youths including one individual who fired a gun several times.

Varnell said no one was injured or arrested and that the person with the gun had apparently fled when law enforcement officers arrived.

He said some of the youths reportedly lay down in the middle of the road and refused to allow vehicles to pass.

Several campers attempting to enter the park reportedly left because of the incident.

Varnell said fights were reported among some of the participants in the disturbance.

The disturbance lasted from about 3 p.m. until about 5 p.m.

Park rangers, who are not armed, requested assistance after the gun firing incident.

Park Manager Greg Smith said he arrived in the day use area of the park as the disturbance was breaking up.

He said it was not immediately apparent how the disturbance began and who was involved, but at the time the area was occupied by several groups of high school students from New Orleans schools. Some of the groups were found to be without chaperones.

He said at least one of the schools would be contacted about the matter. After talking to students, he found out that several schools had apparently "just let them all go for the day."

The Mississippi Legislature recently approved allowing state parks like Buccanneer to charge fees. Admission to the day use area is currently free, but Smith feels having a fee will help prevent future disturbances.

"This is the first one of this kind we have had reported," he said.

"This type of thing is one of the main reasons we want to charge a fee for the day use area. We want to try to start doing so by Memorial Day weekend."

"That won't help our problem with people in the road, since Beach Road is not part of the park and we can't control it, but it will give us better control over the day use area. We're convinced that people who pay to use it will take better care of it and we will have someone stationed at the entry who can be on top of things," Smith said.

"We want to start attracting family-type groups again."

Varnell said that in addition to the park rangers and Waveland Police Department units, one Bureau of Marine Resources officer, several game wardens and deputies from Hancock County Sheriff's Department assisted with the disturbance Friday.

Two Bay St. Louis Police Department cars en route to the park were sent back to the station since the disturbance was under control.

WAVELAND LITTLE LEAGUE OPENS—Waveland's Little League opened Saturday play following a parade of the 14 teams through the city. Among those participating in the opening ceremonies are, from left, Alderman Bob Hubbard, Mayor John Longo, and Hancock Board of Supervisor Bert Courge, with Aaron Clayborn of the KC's at bat and Christy Marie Ladner of the Tigers catching. Both players are members in the T-Ball League which opened the first game of the season Saturday morning. Leonard Logan, Waveland Little League president, said the league involves some 200 players ages six to 12 assisted by some 40 adults. The teams play at Elwood Bourgeois Memorial Park on Central and Waveland Avenues. (Staff photo by Ellis Cuevas).

Amended Woods plat accepted

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK

Several Sunset Street residents appeared at the Bay St. Louis Planning and Zoning Commission meeting Tuesday to protest against the proposed Woods Subdivision.

A petition with more than 50 signatures was presented by Michael D. Haas, spokesman for the group.

Residents at the meeting said they felt the proposed entrance to the subdivision through Sunset Drive and Athletic Drive will not meet the traffic demands for potential residents of the 123-lot development.

The petitioners request the commission, the city council and the mayor to require that the developers provided additional access through an extension of Esplanade Avenue and an extension of Pine Street with direct access to the proposed Woodridge Drive.

A commitment to widen Beyer Drive and Carroll Avenue to a width that would support the traffic increase that would result from such a large development is also requested from the city council.

According to the petition the developers should also be required "to provide an adequate supply of water for both consumption and fire protection, as the present system will not provide a sufficient water pressure for the proposed improvements."

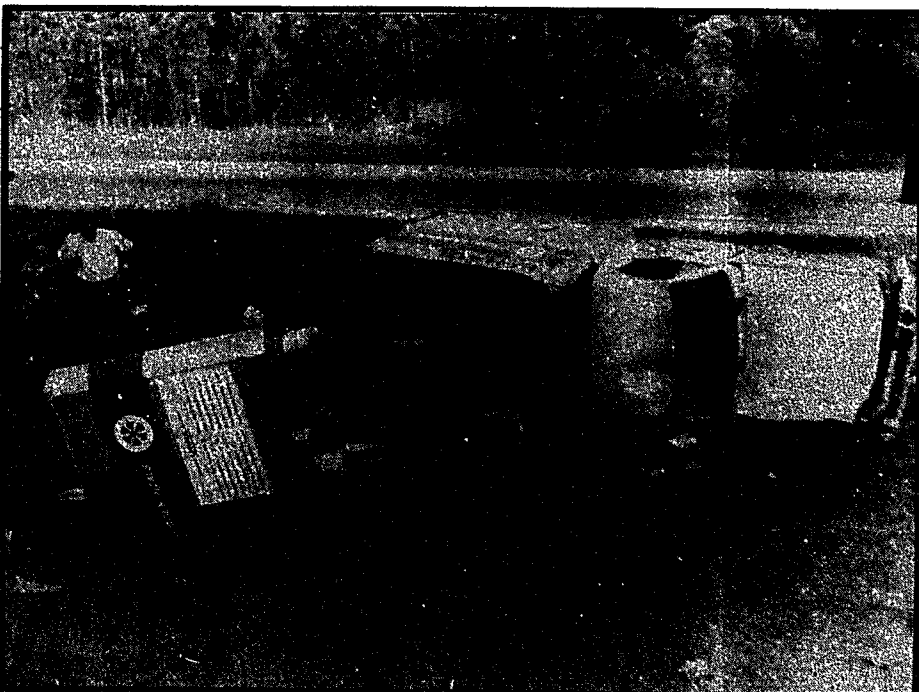

Bay Mayor Victor Frankiewicz said the utility services to the proposed subdivision would not have an adverse effect on those existing in the area.

The eight-inch water line in the area is more than adequate and will be looped, which will actually provide another source of water on Beyer and Athletic drives, he said.

Frankiewicz said addition of the extra water source will also improve the capabilities of the fire department to fight fires on Sunset Drive.

He also said there would be no problems with the sewer service in the area because of the subdivision.

If you decide to move to another town or even another state, chances are your investment would be returned.

However, you may be surprised to find that the same funeral you paid for 10, 5 or even 2 years ago now costs much more. As a result, you may have to compromise some of your selections or pay a higher price for the arrangements you originally selected.

Time for Halley's Comet is running out

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK
Time is running out for Hancock County residents who want to view Halley's Comet.

While peak viewing times have passed, those who haven't yet spotted the comet may still catch a glimpse of the once-every-76-years visitor.

Daney Jackson, 4-H County youth agent, is planning a viewing session at Buccaneer State Park for April 25.

Interested viewers should meet on the beach at approximately 9 p.m.

Jackson said Regina Cates of the Jackson County Planetarium will be on hand to answer questions and assist with spotting the comet.

A pair of binoculars is the recommended aid for viewing the comet, Jackson said.

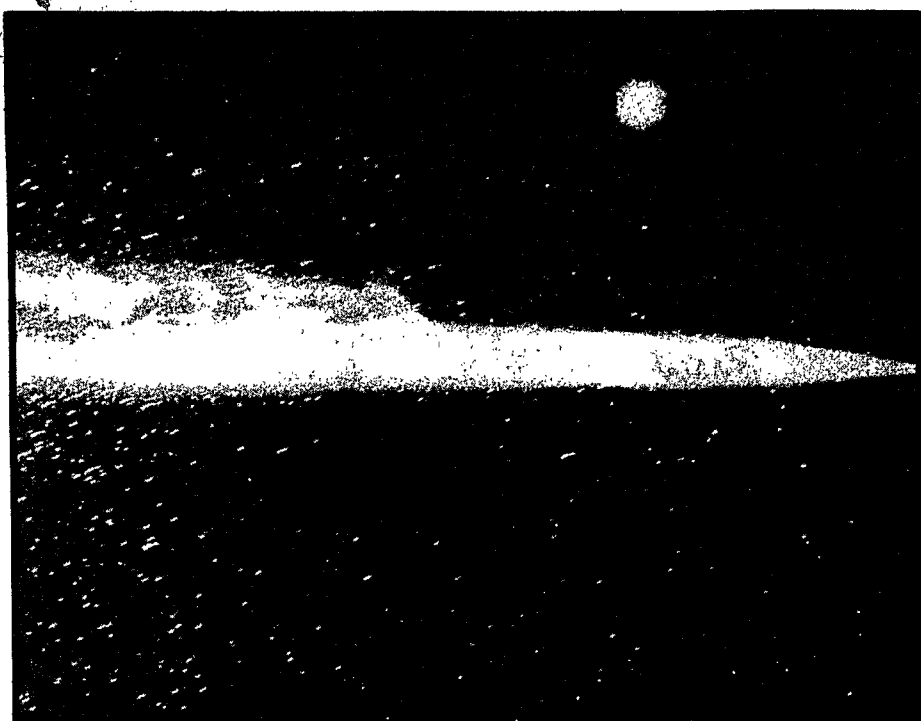

The first appearances of Halley's comet were recorded in 1531 and 1607. The comet was named for Edmond Halley, who theorized that comets seen on these dates and in 1682 were actually the same comet and that it orbited the sun approximately once every 75 years.

He also predicted the comet would appear again in 1758 but did not live to record the return.

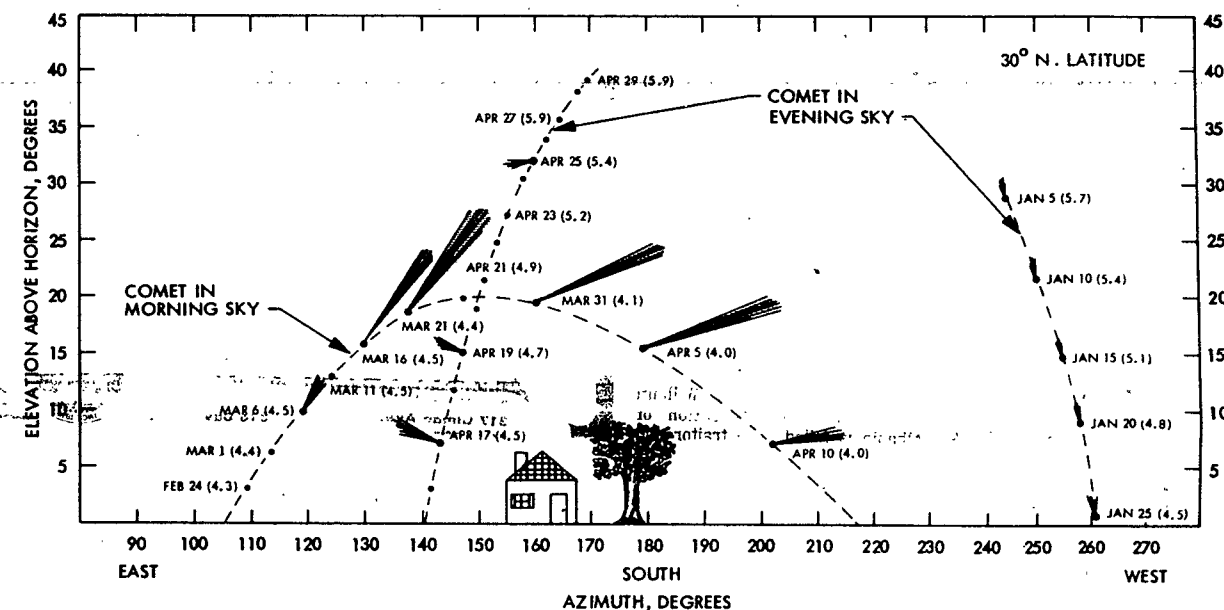

It was predicted that the 1985-86 return of the comet would not be spectacular as previous returns, and in fact views of the comet are recorded to be extremely dim.

Hancock County viewers' best view of the comet is off the beach with an uncluttered horizon and as few as possible lights in the area.

The comet is located in the southeastern sky and beginning this week will be approximately 20 degrees above the horizon.

HALLEY'S COMET—This spectacular view of Halley's Comet was recorded in 1910. For today's viewers, time is almost gone to view the comet in its 1985-86 close encounter with the Planet Earth.

Unit system speakers scheduled by chamber

There are a lot of questions in the minds of many residents of Hancock County on the advantages or disadvantages of our county government operating under a unit system.

A local and private bill will give the qualified electors of Hancock County an opportunity of expressing their preference of continuing under the current system, or changing to the unit system.

On Monday at 1 p.m., a special meeting has been called by the Hancock County Board of Supervisors for discussions on the proposed Unit System.

Members of the Hancock County Planning Commission and a representative from the chamber's task force have been asked by the supervisors to attend this meeting.

It is hoped there be will many other concerned citizens also in attendance.

On Thursday, May 1, the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce's Morning Edition has scheduled two speakers well versed on the operation of a unit system.

The special meeting open to the public will be held in the Bay Senior High Cafeteria, scheduled to begin at 7 a.m.

The reason for the start at 7 a.m. instead of 7:15 is because of the nature of the program, according to Dick Thomas, chamber president.

James B. Heidel, who now serves as the executive director of the Vicksburg Chamber of Commerce will be one of the scheduled speakers.

Heidel served for 10 years as the county administrator under a unit system in Bolivar County, so he should know a lot of how it works.

The second speaker will be G.B. "Red" Beard, president of the Mississippi Concrete Industrial Association.

Beard, a civil engineer, is well informed on the Unit System. He served 1973-77 as mayor of Forrest, and was a road contractor for many years, and is past chairman of the Mississippi Economic Council.

As many of you know, the Mississippi Economic Council has been studying the Unit System for many years.

The Hancock County Chamber's main role now is to provide the public with as much information as possible about the Unit System, Thomas feels.

The chamber's task force is in the process of gathering information, as its members are not one-sided on the matter of how they feel which is the best system for Hancock County's operation.

The chamber's task force after a study may support, oppose or not even take a stand on whether the county should change its form of operation, Thomas indicated.

The chamber, like this newspaper, is trying to provide as much information as possible to the public on a very serious subject.

The decision on whether Hancock County should continue operating under its present structure or change to a unit system will be up to the qualified electors on June 3.

Things do not always go the way one prepares for them to go.

I ran into a prime example Wednesday afternoon when my plans were changed on my way to the Investiture services of U.S. District Judge Walter J. Gex III.

I had planned on attending the ceremonies for several months only to be shot down with car troubles on my way to Biloxi for the very important function.

So, while the ceremonies were underway, myself and my auto were being towed back to Bay St. Louis.

It was one of the ceremonies I really regret that I was unable to attend, especially after planning on being there for such a long time.

We do wish Judge Gex luck in his new position, and as we have mentioned before, his position is a tremendous honor for our community.

It was also a high honor for U.S. District Judge Dan M. Russell, formerly of Bay St. Louis, to have the honors of issuing the oath of office to Judge

HOUSEKEEPING

A Weekly Summary Of

Of Representatives

REP. WALTER PHILLIPS

JACKSON--The Mississippi Legislature has completed its 1986 session following approval of an austere $1.49 billion general fund budget to finance essential services and programs in the year ahead without a general tax increase.

Operating budgets were sharply reduced for many agencies due to financial woes that hounded legislators throughout the 14-week session. But some revenue adjustments in the closing days of the session helped lessen the impact of the cuts in certain vital areas.

Originally, the session was to have ended April 6 but was extended so work could continue on appropriations and budget-related matters. Much of the attention in the final week was on funding universities, highways, mental health, Medicaid and other major programs.

A proposed $436 million appropriation for the state Highway Department was vetoed by the governor, who wanted to shift $11 million to other uses in state government. A motion to override the veto failed in the House and last-ditch efforts to resolve the impasse were unsuccessful. The issue of highway funding remained unsettled as the session ended.

A modified package of cost-saving proposals was passed as part of a move to make extra funds available for budget needs. As finally enacted, the bill contained about $11 million and included such items as early retirement incentives for state employees, a tax amnesty program to encourage delinquent taxpayers to catch up on taxes, increased fees for motor vehicle safety inspections, and reducing the state allotment to local schools for school administrators' salaries.

The final week saw approval of a compromise prison construction bill authorizing two new 500-man inmate housing units -- one at Parchman and the other at a site in South Mississippi selected by the Bureau of Buildings, Grounds and Real Property Management.

Other legislation approved in the closing days included bills for a redistribution of several million dollars in revenue from the Grand Gulf nuclear plant in Claiborne County; redistribution of TVA in-lieu payments in North Mississippi areas served by the Tennessee Valley Authority; and a constitutional amendment aimed at setting more realistic conflict-of-interest standards for public officials.

The Legislature voted to extend a state law which sets a "floating" ceiling on interest rates charged by banks for most loans, starting in July with loans of $125,000 and above.

Although budget problems overshadowed other issues during most of the session, numerous far-reaching bills were approved before the final gavel was rapped. Measures to stimulate economic growth, improve public schools, update election laws, reorganize health care programs, permit statewide banking, and strengthen law enforcement.

On the very first day, the House voted to allocate more than $599 million for general support of public schools, including a $1,000 pay raise for teachers authorized last year as part of the 1985 teacher pay package. Another $40 million was approved for public kindergartens as mandated by the 1982 Education Reform Act. Both bills quickly cleared the Senate and were signed into law before the first week ended.

A bill to provide greater uniformity in school laws was approved later in the session, including a key provision that backers said would give more fiscal independence to county school boards.

An important new program was authorized under another bill to help local officials in efforts to attract industry such as the Boeing plant in Greenville and four-ship Navy base in Pascagoula. The bill allows the issuance of up to $100 million in state bonds to provide loans and grants to local governments for qualified projects.

A sweeping revision of election laws was enacted, including provisions to keep polls open for an extra hour on election day so more people can vote and requiring automatic voting devices by 1989 in all counties. Another bill authorizes Mississippi to take part in a proposed regional presidential primary in 1988 which proponents hope will give the South a stronger voice in the national political arena.

A proposed constitutional amendment was adopted in an effort to give some tax relief to Mississippi homeowners. The proposal, if ratified in a state election this summer, would lower the assessment ratio on residential property from 15 to 10 percent.

The Legislature also approved constitutional amendments to extend the maximum term for leasing 16th Section School Lands from 25 to 40 years, and let people decide this fall if the governor and state treasurer will be permitted to succeed themselves in office.

Other legislation passed during the historic session ranged from bills to upgrade the offices of county constable and county coroner to regulate credit life insurance and extend sovereign immunity for another year.

And a bill was passed repealing the state's long-controversial Blue Laws, allowing cities and counties to deal locally with Sunday sales.

FISCAL CRISIS OVERSHADOWS GOOD LEGISLATIVE WORK

With the conclusion of the 1986 legislative session, the last few weeks' work on the fiscal problems in state government have overshadowed much of the good that was accomplished by the lawmakers this year.

Even in the area of money matters, some very good steps were taken toward averting future financial problems. For example, the Governor and state Fiscal Management Board will now have the power to make cuts from all state budgets -- general and special fund -- if we encounter another fiscal crisis like we have had this year. This means that no longer will just the general fund budgets, which include vital programs like education, law enforcement, and mental health, have to pay the price for low tax collections. The burden of surviving a financial shortfall will be borne by all agencies in government, and that's the way it should be.

The legacy of the 1986 session is proof that once again our legislators have put elementary and secondary education as the top priority for the state. The passage and funding of early childhood education and a $1,000 teacher pay raise and the approval of uniform school laws will go a long way in continuing us on the road to improved education in this state.

Economic development also received a couple of boosts this year. The interstate banking bill will help our growth in this area. The infrastructure bill, that will allow local communities to pursue job-producing industries, will also help the economic stimulation of Mississippi.

Voters were gainers, too, with the passage of the massive election reform act. This law will make it easier for Mississippians to cast their constitutional right to vote.

We also saw some long-time issues approved this year, with the passage of blue law reforms and the placement of a constitutional amendment on the November ballot to allow gubernatorial succession.

As the legislators leave town, many will be fast to criticize them because of the sagging budgets in state agencies. But the fiscal crisis dictated the financial tone of the 1986 Legislature. While, I, too, would have liked to see some agencies receive more money and some receive less, this year we did begin setting priorities for this state. I hope that trend continues.

Waveland obtains improved fire rating

BY DENA BISNETTE
Fire insurance rates in the city of Waveland are expected to go down because the fire department's state rating has been upgraded.

A letter from the Mississippi State Rating Bureau granting the rating change from class eight to class seven was presented to the board of aldermen Wednesday by Fire Chief David Garcia.

The department has been working on the change since last year by adding equipment, modernizing one of the city's older trucks and implementing a twice annual inspection of all hydrants, gate valves and water distribution systems, Garcia said.

He said Charlie Bourgeois of the Waveland Water Department has been assisting the department with the water system and valve inspections.

In addition, the department has marked each hydrant with a blue reflector placed in the center of the street at all hydrant locations.

The department plans to continue trying to upgrade the rating, which is based on the type and amount of equipment the fire department has and on the distribution capability of the city's water system.

One of the items the department plans to obtain is a deluge gun, which is designed to fight fires in high-rise buildings.

"Without support of the city council we could never have gotten it. With their support and funding for the department we were able to acquire the additional equipment," Garcia said.

In other business, the board:

—Approved a proposal by Ward Three Alderman Louis Smolensky for repair of the fence at Garfield Ladner Memorial Pier;

—Approved hiring Ray Eaton and Associates to prepare a Community Development Block Grant application for funds for water and sewerage improvements;

—Authorized Attorney Lucien Gex to defend the city in a lawsuit filed by a survivor of a child killed in a recent house fire on Sears Avenue;

—Proclaimed April 20 through April 26 National Volunteer Week;

—Discussed but took no action on a proposal for placing portable toilets on the beach;

—Accepted a petition requesting the paving of Farrar Street, which had already been scheduled for paving after a current water pipeline replacement project has been completed; and —Approved final plans for paving of Vacation Lane and Farrar Street.

The board meets again May 6 at 7:30 p.m.

Juveniles arrested

BY DENA BISNETTE

Two 16-year-old juveniles have been arrested and charged with burglary and grand larceny in connection with an incident at a BaySide Park residence.

According to Hancock County Sheriff's Department Investigator Delbert Seay, the two were arrested Thursday and were turned over to Hancock County Youth Court authorities.

The youths allegedly took a county-owned pick-up truck from the residence of Fritz Garcia, a Beat One employee, and used the truck to remove various items from the house.

Bay man jailed on $1 million bond

BY DENA BISNETTE

A Bay St. Louis man jailed on $1 million bond is expected to be turned over to Louisiana authorities early this week.

Bay Police Chief Ray Murphy said Saturday that he understands Kester Lee Hall, 42, of Blue Meadow Apartment 107, will waive an extradition hearing on transfer to Lafayette, La., where he is wanted on arson charges and for other crimes.

Murphy said the investigation resulting in Hall's arrest lasted about a week and was a joint operation with the Criminal Investigative Division of the Mississippi Highway Patrol and Hancock County Sheriff's Department.

SO LONG TO DAIRYING!

On August 31, 1986, Walthall County dairyman Joe Stogner will get out of bed long before daylight as he has done regularly throughout his 19-year career as a dairyman. His 93 head of Holstein cows will file into his milking parlor as usual.

And again on that Sunday afternoon Stogner and his herd will do their thing. But when the vacuum pipeline that draws the milk from the machines attached to each cow into a stainless steel tank is shut off for the day, things will no longer be as usual on the Stogner farm about 16 miles southeast of Tylertown.

Joe and Mary Jane Stogner have sold out their dairy operation to the U.S. Department of Agriculture for the next five years beginning on the morning of Sept. 1.

Sometime during September their herd of Holstein dairy cattle will be slaughtered and the meat will be sold as beef despite the fact that they represent superior bloodlines of Holstein stock carefully bred over the years to produce a high volume of quality milk to meet the requirements of the dairy industry.

On top of that, the milk cow beef cut out of Stogner's herd will be an unwelcome addition to the beef market which already has been sent reeling from the impact of the Whole Dairy Herd Buyout program passed recently by the U.S. Congress as a part of the 1985 farm bill.

Stogner is one of 173 Mississippi dairymen whose buyout bid was accepted by USDA this month—about one-fifth of Mississippi's dairymen operation and in line with a national plan to reduce the nation's milk output by 12 billion pounds over the next 18 months.

Nationally, 39,534 dairymen made bids to USDA offering a hundredweight price for the milk they produce annually to drop out of business for the next five years.

In the nation about one-third of the bids were accepted, or those of 13,988 dairymen. The bids represent 1,550,403 animals which include 951,619 milk cows, 340,789 heifers and 257,995 calves.

We visited with Joe and Mary Jane last week to see why he did it. This is his story. And, by the way, Joe is the chairman of the state dairy committee of the Mississippi Farm Bureau Federation.

Joe settled back in a chair in the living room of his attractive home in the hilly country at Sandy Hook. He first acknowledged that he really didn't expect his bid of $15 per hundredweight to be accepted.

But he felt he ought to bid to show faith with national efforts to stabilize production in an industry that has suffered increasingly in recent years from depressed dairy product prices as a result of surpluses. He was in agreement that the nation simply has too many dairy cows in production.

So Joe and his wife took a close look at their dairymen records to determine their cost of production. He added in a small profit, and with mixed emotions, sent in his bid.

He thought his bid would be too high and that would be the end of that. But it wasn't! USDA decided to accept all bids up to $22.50 per hundredweight over the country in order to do the milk reduction job it had set out to do.

"If some of us didn't show a genuine interest in the herd buyout," Joe explained, "I felt that Congress may have turned its back on us."

He went on to explain that he is one of 17 out of a total of 96 dairymen in Walthall County whose bids were submitted. Those accepted now are required by law to slaughter their dairy herds.

"Personally," he added, "I would have liked to stay in dairying, and I would rather have seen them just cut everybody. But I think the dairy industry will be better because of the herd buyout."

The loss of 17 dairies in Walthall County will be felt in the local economy which is almost entirely an agricultural one. Each dairy farm is a big consumer of products purchased from local businessmen.

"Soybeans are gone in Walthall County," Joe explained. He added that cotton had gone to the Delta earlier and soybeans created too much erosion in that hilly country to be truly profitable in the long run. Even wheat acreage now is allotted. So the shrinkage of dairymen in the local farm economy is double trouble.

Joe Stogner was born and reared only two miles from his present home. His father was a farmer and dairyman. He has a son Michael, age 17, and a daughter Deborah, 14. He wants to see them have a college education.

"We've missed a lot of sleep over this," Joe said quietly as wife Mary Jane poured coffee nearby. "And I am afraid that as some of us go out of business to cut production, others will come in or step up production so we will be right back where we were." He sees some form of a milk quota system in the future.

The dairyman said he would keep all of his dairy farming equipment and would run his pipeline system a little bit each month to keep it in working order.

In September, 1991, Joe Stogner will be eligible to become a dairyman again. And he plans to be back in business after a five-year recess.

So long is not goodbye!

March of Dimes to sponsor 'Jail and Bail' fundraiser

The Hancock County Chapter of March of Dimes will sponsor a "Jail and Bail" fundraiser Wednesday and Thursday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day.

For a fee of $10, a participant can select a local citizen to be "arrested and jailed" in a jailhouse at the Jitney Jungle in Markettown Shopping Center in Bay St. Louis.

The arrested person will not be held for the requested arrest. A judge will pronounce a sentence on the convict and set bail.

The arrested person will then be provided with a striped jail hat and coat and will be placed in the jail where telephones will be available for him to call friends and raise bail in the form of contributions to March of Dimes.

No one will be kept in jail more than one hour unless additional pledges are made to keep him there. Arrests may be scheduled by calling 467-9048.

Haas told the commission he would like to request that an engineer verify that providing utility services to the subdivision would not create problems for the existing users.

Developer Ronnie Artigues told the group he wanted the subdivision to be as good as possible.

"I live in the area myself and do not want to build something that would be detrimental to the community," he said.

Artigues also told the group provisions had been made for an extension of Pine Street into the subdivision.

"We are bending over backwards to help the city," he added.

At the meeting, the commission voted unanimously to accept an amended plat for a mini-subdivision on Beyer Drive, which is listed as Phase I of the Woods Subdivision.

The amended plat gave the city an additional 10 feet of land along the right of way on Beyer Drive.

Point of Law

(Prepared by the Mississippi State Bar. Some legal rights may vary from locality to locality. Always consult an attorney when in doubt about your rights.)

Q. What is a peace officer, and what are his duties?

A. A peace officer's job is to help preserve community law and order. He may be known to you as a deputy sheriff, a police officer, a marshal or a constable.

The courts have given peace officers the authority to approach any person in a public place to request information as long as the officer has sufficient reason to justify his action.

He may arrest you with or without an arrest warrant. With an arrest warrant, the officer must tell you the reason for the arrest unless you are actually committing the offense or crime or are being chased.

You are protected from answering any questions asked by a peace officer by the Constitutions of the United States and Mississippi.

Q. Can an officer search me or my home at any time?

A. When you are lawfully arrested, the peace officer may search you as well as your immediate surroundings, your handbag and/or any articles you may be carrying. If the officer feels he may be in danger, he may "pat down" your outer clothing for weapons or other instruments that could cause him injury.

An officer may also search your home if he has a search warrant specifically describing the place to be searched. Before entering the place to be searched, the officer must show the warrant and give notice of his authority and purpose.

However, the officer may "break in" and search a place without notice if the property being looked for could be easily disposed of or destroyed, or if the officer feels the possibility of danger to himself while serving notice.

The officer may also "break in" if he is refused admittance or if no one answers the door, and he has reason to believe someone is in the building.

TURNING LANES—A State Highway Department Crew works on one of three proposed turning lanes on Highway 603 in Hancock County. The turning lanes for Avenue B, Central Avenue and Stennis Airport were recently requested by the Hancock County Board of Supervisors. State Highway Commissioner Bob Joiner said recently in a telephone interview from Jackson that the turning lane project, as well as a proposed turning lane extension in Henderson Point, would be completed despite budget cuts recently placed upon the Highway Department by the State Legislature. (Staff photo by Dena Bisnette)

Prison sentence given in money laundering case

Tookes was arrested by Federal officers in Jackson on June 20, 1985, while he was attempting to take the currency to the Country of Panama.

Bridges and De La Guardia were also indicted by a Federal Grand Jury in connection with the scheme. Bridges entered a guilty plea to one count of the indictment in January, and is currently awaiting sentencing. De La Guardia has not yet appeared in court to answer the indictment.

Federal statutes require all movements of more than $10,000 in currency into or out of the United States to be reported to U.S. Customs. Domestic financial institutions and certain businesses are required to report currency transactions of more than $10,000 with a customer to the Internal Revenue Service.

James N. Tookes was sentenced April 14 by Judge Dan M. Russell to five years imprisonment followed by five years of supervised probation.

The sentence was pronounced in U.S. District Court in Gulfport. Tookes was ordered to be incarcerated immediately.

Tookes, a Tallahassee, Fla. real estate broker, was convicted in January on various Federal charges in connection with a money laundering scheme after a four-day trial in Gulfport.

The scheme involved an attempt by Tookes, a Washington, D.C. travel agent named Walter Bridges, and a Panamanian citizen named Xavier De La Guardia, to transport $100,000 in U.S. currency outside of the United States without reporting the transfer of the cash to U.S. Customs officials.

KATY MC GUIRE CAIRE

There are few things more tantalizing to winter-jaded taste buds than 'spring greens,' wilted with hot bacon or ham dressing, in my opinion.

It's best of all when you can make it with lettuce 'thinings' fresh from the garden patch, along with young radishes and spring onions - but you can use whatever greens you can get your hands on - tender, young fresh spinach is delicious!

The contrast between the fresh, tender 'garden sass' or greenings and the hot dressing is delectable. (And, if some of the greens are a bit larger, just set them aside and cook them old South style, with chunks of slab bacon, and plenty of cornbread a-drip with butter to go along).

Proportions and directions for this dish are along the lines of 'it depends' - for it depends upon the number to be served, as well as on the greens on hand. At any rate, here's:

WILTED GREENS

Three parts of hot bacon drippings to one part cider vinegar
Pinch of dry mustard
Touch of sugar

Dashes of pepper, cayenne and salt

Spinach, lettuce, etc.

Heat the dressing, and pour - at the very last minute before serving - over lettuce, spinach (raw, of course), or any other tender young greens. Toss quickly so as to coat leaves thoroughly.

Chopped or coarse-cut green onions are a delicious addition, along with sliced radishes and such. Some cooks like to add dices of crisp bacon, some even add chunks of hard-cooked eggs, some even add tomatoes - but that's not the real wilted salad, to me.

For variation, you may want to substitute red-eye ham gravy for the bacon dressing. To make this, you fry off a ham slice, add water or black coffee to the luscious 'burnings' in the pan, stir it all around the skillet, and pour over the greens.

P.S. The term 'red-eye' comes from what looks like a red-eye glaring at you as you swish the burnings and liquid about in the skillet.

Arceneaux-Cassidy

Cynthia Marie Cassidy of Slidell, La. and Louis G. Arceneaux II of Bay St. Louis were married April 5 at St. Clare Catholic Church in Waveland. The Rev. John O'Brien performed the evening ceremony.

Wedding music was performed by Mrs. Olive McKenna, organist. Scripture readings were delivered by Denise Stanley, the maid of honor.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Cassidy. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Louis G. Arceneaux of Bay St. Louis.

Escorted to the altar by her father, the bride wore a gown of white tulle featuring a high neckline and full skirt which formed a chapel train. The full sleeves were trimmed with point d'esprit and venise laces as was the deep yolk. The natural waist was also appliqued with venise lace highlighted with seed pearls to match the appliques on the skirt.

Her satin hat was adorned with silk gardenias and waist-length veil. She carried a cascade of white silk gardenias and stephanotis.

The bridesmaids wore dresses of taffeta and fantasia each with a ruffled train in colors of blue, lilac, green and rose. They wore matching hats with veiling and fresh flowers.

Denise Stanley of Slidell served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were sisters of the groom Deborah Singletary and Lynn Fillingame, both of Bay St. Louis; and sister of the bride Kathleen Brannon of Pearl River, La.

The flower girl, in apricot, was Dana Fillingame, niece of the groom. Jeremy Singletary, nephew of the groom, was ring bearer.

Wayne Fillingame of Bay St. Louis was the best man.

Groomsmen were Donald Tanguis, cousin of the groom; Matthew Luke Arceneaux, brother of the groom; and father of the groom, Louis G. Arceneaux, all of Bay St. Louis.

Serving as ushers were Larry Blackwell and Wayne Carter, both of Bay St. Louis.

Following the ceremony, the couple was honored at a reception at the VFW Hall in Bay St. Louis. Entertainment was by the 'Juke Jumpers.' After a honeymoon trip to Key Largo and Orlando, Fla., the couple resides in Bay St. Louis.

HOME SWEET HOME IMPROVEMENT

Lawn & Garden ISSUE

Idea House '86 designed for the 'trade-up' buyer

LANCASTER, Pa.—If you're planning to buy a home—and lots of people are, now that mortgage rates have fallen so sharply—the chances are you already own one. First-time buyers no longer dominate the housing market, as they used to. They've been replaced in that role by "trade-up" buyers who, the Wall Street Journal reports, make up more than 60 percent of all home buyers.

Trade-up buyers are generally older, more affluent, often two-income families. They may be "empty nesters" (people whose children have grown up and moved away).

Unlike first-time buyers who are usually happy to get a roof over their heads, trade-up buyers are looking for something more than basic shelter. They want a home—not necessarily a larger one—with more conveniences and amenities whose floor plan suits the way they prefer to live.

Armstrong's Idea House '86 in Lancaster, Pa., was developed expressly with trade-up buyers in mind. Excessive behavioral mapping by company experts confirmed that same rooms of the home (formal living and dining rooms) are seldom used, while others such as eat-in kitchens and TV rooms are in constant use. Idea House '86 was designed to give people a reason to use every room every day.

The layout of the two-story, 3,406-square-foot house is based on the concept of "suites"—multifunctional living areas and rooms. The core of the house is the three ground-floor suites: a living suite, kitchen suite and master bedroom suite. Upstairs are two bedrooms, one of which doubles as a home office, and a bath.

The interior color scheme takes its cue from the multifunctional nature of the suites. The core of the house is the three ground-floor suites: a living suite, kitchen suite and master bedroom suite. Upstairs are two bedrooms, one of which doubles as a home office, and a bath.

Idea House '86 is energy efficient. A heat pump and super-insulated energy storage system (SESS) go sparingly on the electricity. The SESS system stores heat at night when electric rates are lower and releases it during the day.

Pocket doors permit the suites to be closed off and the temperatures turned down in other parts of the house. In fact, with the doors to the rest of the house shut, the kitchen and master bedroom suites can function as a self-contained apartment for two.

Depending on the builder and the location, Armstrong projects that Idea House '86 will cost approximately $185,000 to $225,000 to erect. The estimate includes land.

To receive a free 12-page brochure on Idea House '86, containing additional information, many color photographs and floor plans, write for: Armstrong World Industries, Free Idea House Brochure, P.O. Box 3001, Lancaster, Pa. 17604. Or call 800-233-8283 toll-free and ask for a complimentary copy of the Idea House brochure.

Greenhouse popular home addition

When it comes to expanding their homes through room additions, many people are choosing greenhouses, according to a survey by greenhouse manufacturer and installer.

"Most of our customers are interested in changing their existing home, office or restaurant rather than building a new one," says Christopher Esposto, president of the Four Seasons Greenhouse Furniture network, based in Farmingdale, N.Y.

"The greenhouse structure is most popular because we are selling the feel of outdoor living and bringing it indoors."

Four Seasons Greenhouses offers customers prefabricated kits for do-it-yourself installation and partial or complete dealer installation.

Its design uses a built-in shading system and special glass that reflects heat, but not light, away in summer and reflects heat back inside in winter, while retaining visibility clear.

Other features include a weatherlight cooling system and tempered curved glass.

A typical 10-foot-by-16-foot greenhouse addition costs $10,000 to $15,000 fully installed, says Esposto.

Among his customers, he says, are celebrities Tom Seaver and Jane Fonda, and commercial companies including Kentucky Fried Chicken and Hyatt Hotels.

Bright, Perky Geraniums Increase In Popularity

By Jim Perry
Landscape Specialist
Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service

For more than 300 years, gardeners have enjoyed the continuously renewing color of geraniums in the garden. Bright colors, perky flower heads and contrasting foliage have made them increasingly popular favorites.

Geraniums are the ultimate luxury color plants at affordable prices. They come in every flower color, except blue and yellow. Their diversity of flower form and color, growth habits and garden requirements make them highly adaptable for home gardeners.

Zonal Geraniums have zones or patterns in the center of the leaves. These are the ones most people recognize. They are becoming very popular because of their sparkling colors, self-branching habit and compact growth. Some of the varieties also have unusually dark, green foliage which makes a particularly striking contrast to the colorful flowers.

The flower heads or umbels are held above the foliage, making them an eye-catching sight.

Ivy-leaved geraniums have been developed from Pelargonium peltatum. In Europe, more than 45 percent of all geraniums produced are ivy geraniums. They're particularly valuable for use in container plantings, hanging baskets and window boxes where their flowering character is particularly apt for soft effects. Traditionally, they've been used alone. But, modern gardeners use them with other flowering plants for variety.

The plants are self-cleaning, which means that the spent flower umbels drop away when finished blooming.

A generation or two ago, most families overwintered geraniums as houseplants, and with sunny windows achieved a certain success in flower production during mid-winter. The development of compact types makes this a reality again. Some geranium producers are even growing them as pot plants for fall and winter sales so they can be enjoyed for several weeks in the home.

Now that danger of frost is past, geraniums can go directly outdoors into planting beds and raised planters. Or, to them in pots to be set about the terrace or patio. Potted geraniums can be brought indoors for a brief visit or decor, then returned outdoors for continued growth.

Mississippi gardeners can expect blooming to lull during late June and July. As cooler night and day temperatures return by mid-August, a new flush of blooms will begin and continue through fall.

Question: The building material business seems to be prospering. What part of their success can be attributed to the surge in home improvements? E. R. Broekhoven

Answer: Dear E.R.: Yes, there has been a surge in home improvements, with the result being an estimated record $60 billion sales figure for the building material industry in 1988. Growth in this sector is forecast to be more than 6 percent greater than it was last year after allowing for inflation.

However, the volume of sales will vary significantly by region, with the greatest gains occurring in New England and the East South Central and Mid-Atlantic states.

Industry analysts attribute the significant growth to the fact that escalation of home prices and tighter lending restrictions continue to offset declines in mortgage interest rates in promoting home sales.

By Dr. Frances Graham

Because of market demands, many architects today design smaller dwellings. Many of these new designs make use of every square foot of living space and put the house on its best foot.

There are also many small homes and residential units poorly designed, so prospective buyers of such homes should be able to recognize a well-designed home that offers privacy, livability and ease of function.

The first consideration is the lot and outside living space. Since interior space is limited, it is important to look to the possibility of expanding the exterior space to the outside with large windows or patio doors.

The expanded outdoor space should be pleasant to look at. If it is to be used for privacy or security, it should be enclosed with a fence or gate.

Next, study the home's design and decide if additions would be possible. In the event they were needed later, decide whether an addition would distort or take away from the home's appearance.

The dwelling's floor plan should make the best possible use of the allotted space. Extra-wide hallways, closets that are too deep, poorly placed room openings or odd-shaped rooms all can waste valuable living space that could be put to better use.

For more flexibility all living areas should be on one floor so that the rooms can be used for more than one purpose. Look for house plans with fewer rooms, fewer walled hallways and carefully-planned storage areas

A separate dining room may be a thing of the past. To make better use of space, look for a dining area that is in either the kitchen or living room. The arrangement allows either area to be expanded into the other if extra space is needed.

If a separate dining area is necessary, make sure that it is multi-functional. Have it double as a guest room, study or hobby room. to make small rooms seem larger. Opening up the ceiling area with a cathedral or vaulted ceiling or skylights also gives a feeling of spaciousness. Use of sound-absorbent materials will also help provide privacy.

Be sure interior living areas are not broken up by traffic patterns. Plan doorways and openings so that traffic goes through one edge of a room rather than through the middle.

Useful planning is perhaps more essential in the kitchen than in other rooms. The kitchen is probably the most costly to build and yet it is the most difficult to plan.

A small well-planned kitchen can be more efficient than a large one with scattered work areas. Plan the kitchen so it makes the best use of the floor space and storage areas.

Laundry equipment should also be designed in the kitchen or bath area to eliminate the need for a separate room.

Idea House '86 designed for the 'trade-up' buyer

LANCASTER, Pa. — If you're planning to buy a home—and lots of people are, now that mortgage rates have fallen so sharply—the chances are you already own one. First-time buyers no longer dominate the housing market, as they used to. They've been replaced in that role by "trade-up" buyers who, the Wall Street Journal reports, make up more than 60 percent of all home buyers.

Trade-up buyers are generally older, more affluent, often two-income families. They may be selling their present home to buy a new one. They're looking for something more than basic shelter. They want a home—yet necessarily a larger one—with more conveniences and amenities whose floor plan suits the way they prefer to live.

Of special architectural note is the glass-enclosed central atrium which rises from the basement to the second floor. A large skylight in the roof pours light down the stairs and into the house.

The layout of the two-story, 2,346-square-foot house is based on the concept of "nooks"—multifunctional living areas, not rooms. The core of the house is the three ground-floor nooks: a living suite, kitchen suite and master bedroom suite. Upstairs are two bedrooms, one of which doubles as a home office, and a bath.

The interior color scheme takes its cue from the multifunctional areas, not rooms. The core of the house is the three ground-floor nooks: a living suite, kitchen suite and master bedroom suite. Upstairs are two bedrooms, one of which doubles as a home office, and a bath.

The house's many large windows, giving expansive views of the landscaped surroundings, suggested the choice of a pleasing earthy line like mushroom to blend with the natural environment. The accent color (in area rugs, furniture upholstery and so on) is soft blue. Brass accessories are used.

The house's exterior is cedar siding, stained gray with gray window trim. It has a lowering stone chimney.

The living suite has a conversation area, book shelves and fireplace at one end and, at the other, a media wall and another seating arrangement. A cathedral ceiling and hot provide architectural interest to the living suite. (The house's architect is post-modern, which combines the best of contemporary and historical design influences.)

Bright, Perky Geraniums Increase In Popularity

By Jim Perry
Landscape Specialist
Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service

For more than 300 years, gardeners have enjoyed the continuously renewing color of geraniums in the garden. Bright colors, perky flower heads and contrasting foliage have made them increasingly popular favorites.

Geraniums are the ultimate luxury color plants at affordable prices. They come in every flower color, except blue and yellow. Their diversity of flower form and color, growth habits and garden requirements make them highly adaptable for home gardeners.

Zonal Geraniums have zones or patterns in the center of the leaves. These are the ones most people recognize. They are becoming very popular because of their sparkling colors, self-branching habit and compact growth. Some of the varieties also have unusually dark green foliage which makes a particularly striking contrast to the colorful flowers.

The flower heads or umbels are held above the foliage, making them an eye-catching sight. Ivy-leaved geraniums have been developed from Pelargonium peltatum. In Europe, more than 45 percent of all geraniums produced are ivy geraniums. They're particularly valuable for use in container plantings, hanging baskets and window boxes where their flowering character is particularly apt for sort effects. Traditionally, they've been used alone. But, modern gardeners use them with other flowering plants for variety.

A generation or two ago, most families overwintered geraniums as houseplants, and with sunny windows achieved a certain success in flower production during mid-winter. The development of compact types makes this a reality again. Some geranium producers are even growing them as pot plants for fall and winter sales so they can be enjoyed for several weeks in the home.

Now that danger of frost is past, geraniums can go directly outdoors into planting beds and raised planters. Or, try them in pots to be set about the terrace or patio. Potted geraniums can be brought indoors for a brief visit or decor, then returned outside for continued growth.

Mississippi gardeners can expect blooming to lull during late June and July. As cooler night and day temperatures return by mid-August, a new flush of blooms will begin and continue through fall.

KITCHEN SUITE—In addition to an informal built-in bookcase, a wet bar, powder room and breakfast room, the versatile "Kitchen Suite" has a more formal dining area (shown here), enclosed central stairwell.

WHY I TRADE AT HOME.

I trade at home and never roam
Seeking "bargains" elsewhere.
I love the town in which I live,
For all my interests are there.
And then again, I buy from friends,
We all need one another,
When I run short I can approach
My dealer as a brother.

When buying here, with conscience clear,
I put my money down,
I know it stays right here and works
For the welfare of my town.

Another thing, right here I bring
The produce that I raise
And always get an honest deal
I've found that it pays.

And then, I know when buying here
It helps things to relax
And also helps the man who pays
His portion of the tax.

And when I'm sick or in hard luck
The man I buy from's here
With the pocket book, if need be,
And kindly words of cheer.

So that is why I trade at home
I'm a booster through and through,
For a town that's good to live in,
Is good to buy in, too.

Vacation home a good tax break

The Sea Coast Echo Home Improvement Issues

If you are one of the thousands of families who own a vacation or second home, that property can provide valuable tax breaks if you qualify. The tax rules are found in IRC 280A which governs family real estate tax benefits.

The basic deductions. Mortgage interest and property taxes always qualify as income tax deductible expenses. For most second home owners these deductions result in major income tax savings. In addition, uninsured casualty losses such as fire, flood, or theft damages are deductible for amounts exceeding 10 percent of the owner's adjusted gross income.

But additional second home tax deductions, for operating expenses such as utilities, fire insurance, and even depreciation, may be available depending on the extent of the owner's personal use of the vacation or second home. There are only four possible categories of personal use.

No personal use. If you did not personally use your second home last year and either rented it to tenants or made it available for rent during the entire year, then the property is "trade or business property" rather than personal use real estate. "Tax shelter" for some of your other ordinary taxable income can result.

Some who bought homes five years ago reap benefits

Five years ago many American families were faced with one of the biggest gambles of their lives, and for those who took it the gamble paid off.

Perhaps nothing comparable to it has ever happened in the history of consumer finance, and it isn't likely to be repeated. The family decision was this: to seize the opportunity to own a house at a relatively low price, and take a chance that the economy would improve? Or play it safe, forego the house, and rent instead.

Many reasons existed for taking the safe course.

Because of the recession, units were uncoupled in many areas of the country and their owners were happy to offer inducements to prospective renters. And mortgage rates were at exceedingly high levels.

To get fixed-rate mortgage back then a borrower had to be willing to pay around 10 percent. Variable rates were becoming more popular, but at the time nobody was certain those rates wouldn't vary even higher.

Consider the magnitude of the decision.

Just a decade earlier, many people had obtained long-term, fixed-rate mortgage loans at one-half what lenders now asked of their latest customers. Over 30 years, the difference on a $50,000 loan would be nearly $100,000.

Those who took the risk won, and more than a few of them — and bankers too — are surprised by the outcome. Prices since then have risen steadily in most areas, and spectacularly in some. And interest rates dropped sharply.

So sharp has been the decline that all households that paid those 15 percent mortgage rates can now remortgage at lower rates, pay the fees — called points — for the new mortgages — and put money in their pockets.

Many are in the enviable position of being able to take money out of their properties by increasing the size of the mortgage without adding to their monthly payments. Or, in some instances, even lowering their payments.

The savings are of that magnitude. One $50,000, 30-year, fixed-rate loan the monthly payments at 15 percent are a bit more than $83; on a similar loan at 10 percent the monthly payment is under $40.

But even lower rates are appearing. This week a New York area lender offered a variable rate at 8.375 percent, guaranteed for three years and with a cap — or maximum — during the 30-year period of 13.375 percent.

An intriguing element to the gamble still remains: should those with high mortgage rates refinance now, or wait? Should they lock in their savings now, or take the chance that rates will fall even more?

Those who took the big gamble in the first place have the nerves to deal with this latest challenge, but opinions should help. And the consensus of published opinions is that mortgage rates are destined to fall even more.

Charles Washhouse, economist with Citicorp Investment Bank, observes that more than 90 percent of the variation in mortgage rates in the 1970s and 1980s has matched movements in the yield on 30-year Treasury bonds.

A month ago, those Treasury bonds had fallen 14 points since last autumn. Mortgage rates had declined less than 1 point. Therefore, he concludes that mortgage rates are scheduled for "a sizable fall."

Merrill Lynch sees those same Treasury bonds falling sharply in the second quarter. And declaring "interest rates have collapsed," Rinehart Associates, economic consultants, forecasts 9 percent, fixed-rate mortgages by the end of the year.
